Herring Notes.

The St. John's, Newfoundland, Herald in its issue of February 23 says:—"There have been to date 13 American vessels at Woody and Sound Islands, Placentia Bay, for frozen herring. Of that number five have left loaded and several others could remain no longer so departed with part cargoes. Net men have shared as high as $70 each. Some of the seine crews did remarkably well, making as much as $170 a man. There were fewer fishermen engaged this season than for many years past, and on that account those who had nets were very successful. Some of the old fishermen are of opinion that the use of "purse seines" should be permitted. If such were in use this year every vessel that wanted herring could load as there were never so many fish seen in the bay before. There is also a strong feeling among those engaged in this industry that traps might without endangering the fishery be used. It would be in no way disastrous to the supply of herring, as when trapped, they need not be taken from the water except as required, and in small quantities to suit all. This would also, these people contend, give them a supply of bait in the spring when most needed for codfishery. One man forcibly puts it, that the herring are sent in the bay by Providence. The Americans come with their gold, but the fishermen are prevented from securing either fish or gold when sent to their doors. They propose petitioning their representatives in the matter of herring traps at an early date."

Herring were never so plentiful as now at Placentia Bay, but they are in deep water and scarce inshore.
